FEUSTEL REFUSED LICENSE TO TRAIN

Racegoers Are Surprised by Action Taken by the Jockey Club.

APPLICATION LAID OVER Official List of Dates for Season Gives Opening at Jamaica on May 6.

By HENRY V. KING.

Louis Feustel, the famous young trainer who developed and trained the immortal Man o' War for Samuel D. Riddle during the colt's racing career, was refused a license by the Jockey Club yesterday afternoon. His application for a permit to train was "laid on the table."

Other trainers, including James Bolen, James Denison, Vincent Richard, Cecil Knight and John McManis, were denied licenses. Johnny Loftus, Gross Charles and Eddie Patton were denied jockey licenses. Ted Rice, Maurice Rowan and J. Zoeller, who were suspended last season, were reinstated.

Just before the license committee handed down these decisions the Jockey Club announced the racing dates for the season.

The season will open at Jamaica on May 6 and continue through May 25.

On May 27 the scene will shift to Belmont Park, where the sport will continue until June 14.

Agueduct will open on June 17 and run through July 8.

The Empire City meeting will begin on July 8 and last until July 26.

Then the three-ownership and their followers will move to Saratoga for the month of August, the meeting at the Spa lasting from August 1 to August 31 inclusive.

Dates in the Fall.

In the fall the sport will be resumed at Belmont Park on September 2 and continue there until September 16.

Agueduct will follow with a meeting from September 17 to September 30.

Jamaica will hold its second season from October 1 to October 15, and Monticello City will close the season with a meeting from October 15 to October 27.

The tabling of Feustel's application was the biggest surprise the Jockey Club has handed out in many years. No explanation for the action was made.

It was learned that there was no charge of wrongdoing against the young trainer. Feustel has an unsullied reputation and always has been considered a righteously honest horseman.

Both the Jockey Club and the spirit of the rules of racing and his horses running consistently. He is not a betting man, and the information about his horses practically belonged to the public. Only the professional gamblers were barred from his stables and stalls.

That Feustel's license was refused was a shock to all concerned but a relief to him. He is at Mr. Riddle's farm at Berlin, Md., and when told over the long distance telephone by a New York Herald reporter that his application had been refused he would not for many minutes believe it. When convinced that such was the case he laughed and said:

"That's a joke. I'm not afraid and I won't lose any sleep over it. I'll have the best of the season. I can't answer truthfully and satisfactorily."

"I had one or two drinks on the track on a couple of occasions. I wonder if that would be a reason?"

"There's nothing else unless it is to compel me to testify against a prominent trainer who is likely to lose his license this year."

Other sources it was learned that several members of the Jockey Club heard what they considered a violation of the rules of the sport by a prominent trainer and that Feustel knew something about the case. Feustel was quizzed about the matter by these officials, but refused to tell what he knew about the other trainer.

Interest Aroused in Boston Should Be Beneficial to Westchester Tourney.

By KERR S. PETRIE.

The decision of five of the Boston golf clubs to form a "fourball league" this year is a happy augur for the success of the big bet on the fact that in other sections this phase of the game has made much headway that the clubs are ready to organize themselves into a league would seem to indicate that it is going to command widespread attention. Beyond the fact that Westchester will launch its innovation some time during the season, when the stars are thinking and playing championship golf little is known of the details of the contemplated new tournament save that it will be an open event for amateurs and professionals, the regular tournament schedule of medal qualifying round, followed by match play elimination.

Meanwhile the Boston fourball league is going ahead with its plan, and in consequence the Westchester officials should feel justified in believing that they will be able to count on half a dozen more entries from the New England district at least. Wollaston, Chestnut Hill, Whiteoak, Weston and Oakley were the founder members of the "Boston Fourball League." It is the intention to add three more clubs. In all likelihood eight will be the limit for this year, but by another season it will be surprising to hear that the league has grown considerably. So far the league has decided to play its first match on May 3. Other contests will be held practically every week after that.

In one of the metropolitan sections should feel sufficiently interested it might be mentioned that it is the intention to have each team made up of the best eight amateur men in the club and that scoring will be on the Nassau system.

One of the most engrossing professional matches of the early British season was that played recently at Coombe Hill between the two Channel Islanders who finished first and second in the American national open and the pair who won the Scottish open.
